This extension is based on the Internet Explorer "My Search" search. If you like My Search, you will love this extension, too. You can organize your search history in a logical way (it is easy to add more sites to the list of search sites), control all the search settings directly from your desktop (which search engine to use, the search site, the folder to search and etc) and it is also possible to add a custom search widget. How to install: Download the zip archive containing MySearch.exe and this extension's manifest.json file. Unzip the archive and extract the folder MySearch (inside the folder there is also the extension and a sample extension) in your Opera extensions folder (where your Opera extensions are located). Start Opera and make sure the "MySearch" option is checked in the Extensions menu. Go to the same folder in which you have extracted MySearch and drag the extension into Opera's Extensions window. Change the extension's name to something else if you wish. Enable the extension, close Opera and go to Opera's extensions folder and restart Opera. How to use: Check out the official extension manual for full information. Have fun, Your Opera team. A: Opera now has an extension store called Opera Mini Store. It's in beta testing and ready for testing. A: Opera used to have a "Add-ons" feature. It didn't work well with the "Search" feature. The interface was somewhat limited as you could only install one add-on at a time. If you had an Opera site you'd want to install in that one, it was a bit complicated. Now Opera has a "Add-ons" interface on its own. They've added several add-ons there. It works like the Firefox Add-ons site (except that your add-on folders are hidden from sight). It's pretty well organized and I think it's pretty good. It allows installing multiple add-ons (in different folders) on the same website. I don't think it's as good as Opera's own "Search" feature. But it's certainly better than "Add-ons" in Opera 11 (previous to this one). If you don't like any of the things in the "Add-ons" interface, you can install another search engine. Q: how to pass a variable value from one function to another in python I want to pass the value of "global_filename" to another function
