Use of the ImmunoCard STAT! assay for the detection of antibodies to HIV-1 in pregnant women in Cordoba, Argentina: cross reactivity with hepatitis C virus and implications for antenatal screening. To assess the performance of the immunoCard STAT! assay (Immunodiagnosics) for the detection of antibodies to HIV-1 in pregnant women in Cordoba, Argentina. Antibody prevalence in non-pregnant women (n=435) and in pregnant women (n=430) was 41% and 1.5%, respectively. Two hundred and thirty-nine of 430 seropositive pregnant women (55.1%) had no known risk factors for HIV-1 infection. The overall agreement was 91.5% between the immunoCard STAT! and the virus-specific ELISA (Sybimmune, DiaSorin, Italy). No significant difference was observed between the performance of the assay at 42 days after delivery and in relation to gestational age, type of delivery, antibodies to hepatitis C virus, or CD4/CD8 lymphocyte counts. The prevalence of HIV-1 and of hepatitis C virus antibodies was higher than the prevalence of HIV-1 among pregnant women from neighbouring countries of Argentina. The immunoCard STAT! was a highly sensitive and specific assay for the identification of all HIV-1 positive sera. The assay is useful as a routine screening test to identify pregnant women with no known risk factors for HIV-1 infection and for the diagnosis of recent infection.#!/bin/bash # We still want to support the old version, so let's check that # the new 09e8f5149f

A modified version of the International Statistical Classification of Diseases and Related Health Problems, for its volume 11th-edition (ICD-11), contains modifications to several codes. The most important are the addition of new concepts such as indicators of alcohol consumption, being a pregnant woman, infertility, pregnancy-related conditions and pregnancy, birth and the neonate. The changes in the codes include splitting of the concept of birth to include a fetal death. New codes also include maternal deaths, intrapartum maternal conditions and antepartum condition for the neonate, and a new concept of biological and physical disorders due to war and violence, placing them in one section. These and other modifications represent important advances in the new edition of ICD to reflect the new knowledge, progress in healthcare and the respect of human rights.Q: How to add new data to mysql 5.7.x using java?
