SEATTLE, Washington (CNN) -- Fired Department of Justice official Patrick Fitzgerald testified Thursday at the trial of Tim Russert's wife, Patricia Russert, for conspiracy to commit mail fraud, making a false statement and obstruction. Brigadier general Patrick Fitzgerald testified at the trial of Patricia Russert. The felony trial for Patricia Russert, the wife of former NBC anchor Tim Russert, is the first to be held since the Justice Department announced the ouster of Fitzgerald last December. The trial continues Friday and will be presided over by a federal judge in northern Illinois, where Patricia Russert, a Chicago native, once worked for the school board. "It was like this was an election," said CNN legal analyst Jeffrey Toobin, who covered the federal trial in court. "The chief prosecutor was Colonel John O'Neill, who's one of the heroes of 9/11. I mean, he went to his death as the chief prosecutor on the anthrax case. And here was one of the great heroes of 9/11 testifying against his wife, and the trial seemed to get bigger and larger every day." Toobin said the news coverage focused on things like whether the government was being sexist in focusing on the trial of Patricia Russert, a woman. "Yes, there were women reporters. But the media coverage for the most part was really focused on these 6,000 pages of evidence and documents," he said. Prosecutor Tom Tiffany urged jurors on Thursday to look beyond the evidence and focus on the "nature and intent" of Patricia Russert. He called her an "astute and sophisticated criminal" who knew her husband Tim, also a newsman, worked for the network that employs her, NBC. Tiffany said all of the Russerts' expenses were paid for by NBC. He said they rented an oceanfront condo in Florida for Tim Russert and used it for more than six years. "This is the kind of way of life that Mrs. Russert and her family enjoy," said Tiffany. Tiffany said the couple took a 13-day Caribbean cruise, an expense the prosecution alleges was used to hide the fact that Tim Russert had an affair. "He rented out his condo, they moved. They did everything to hide the fact that he was doing this," said Tiffany. The Russerts rented an apartment in Washington, D.C., but when they started
