Seen: 9th October Years ago I did a monthly column at Strange Horizons called 'Culture Parnassus' where I would sit down and think about what I was into at the time.
One of my column titles was 'I Feel Like Somebody' and that always stuck in my head because it was just a list of things. It was just things that caught my interest at the time but I could never really think of a better way to do them.
Well, we're hitting at a similar time and I thought I'd try and adapt that format to be a little more about my current interests and that I might be able to follow it through and say, "Well, this was a good place to start." The reason why I'm making this is because, these days, the things that I'm doing are not necessarily the things that I'm interested in. I'm not the crazy guy who's on Twitter every single day debating the very meaning of life. I'm not the guy who is obsessively reading obscure bloggers about a new children's show in the Weeping Angels universe or a science fiction podcast about overpopulation. I'm no longer doing Comic Cons and so I really shouldn't be writing about comics and television shows. As I am writing this, I think I'm about to come up with one episode where I talk about every single Doctor Who companion character in one sitting. This is not that. I'm not sure when this is going to end, but it's not the high water mark that I was thinking about. So, I'm coming out of a gap where I'm thinking about what I'm interested in and I'm going to do a list about that. I was thinking

Typically, a photoresist is formed on a substrate, and an image is transferred to the photoresist by exposing the photoresist to radiant energy, typically ultraviolet light. A developing solution is then used to selectively remove either the exposed or the unexposed photoresist to create the desired pattern on the substrate. The photolithography process is limited by the diffraction of light and the wavelength of the radiation used to expose the photoresist. To overcome the diffraction effects, smaller feature sizes are possible when shorter wavelengths of light (e.g., ultraviolet light) are used in photolithography. In addition, the optics used to expose the photoresist must be

This happened to almost all of the items, even those that are using image size attributes (such as UIImage.init(named: "icon.png", in: bundle, compatibleWith: nil)?.resize(size: 10)) The icon sizes for the simulator were unaffected. Is there a way to fix this? A: I have solved this problem. I opened the project file in xcode and removed all the image assets, and reuploaded them. This is a solution to me, because I wasn't able to update any of the images because of that error "xcode has downloaded the assets from the internet" Hope this helps anyone having the same issue. Q: How to Change the background of a p:selectOneMenu I am using PrimeFaces 6.0.2. I want to change the background of my p:selectOneMenu to gray. Is there a way to do this? A: While you can try css for this, I would suggest you to try it with using PrimeFaces Colors a CSS library that helps you to add and remove color presets for PrimeFaces components that get rendered via JQuery. To change the background of your p:selectOneMenu, you can use: Selection List Background Color Select Field Background Color An example: CSS: .ui-widget-content.ui-state-default, .ui-widget-content.ui-state-hover, .ui-widget-header.ui-state-hover, .ui-widget-header.ui-state-default { background-color: #cfb1a5; } HTML:
